

Research Project Name:

Transition in Myanmar

IHRP Staff and/or Students involved:

Matt Mullen, PhD, IHRP Lecturer and Ya Tu, IHRP MA Student

Theme, Rationale, and Objectives of the Research:

- Identify the various forces and efforts that prompted the transition in Myanmar
- Synthesize the relationship between these forces and efforts

- Investigate grassroots assessments of the transition in Myanmar
- Analyze discussions in the field regarding the transition relative to the dominant discourse surrounding

Target Audience:

Myanmar focused scholars, activists and practitioners

Short Description of the Research Process:

Over 500 ethnographic interviews [throughout Myanmar] and 50 plus key informant interviews gathered

Results of the Research:

-

Period of Time:

The transition monitoring and analysis will likely continue over the coming years.

Supporters/Partners and/or Affiliates:

- Joint research with Elliott Prasse Freeman, Yale University
- Supported by Mentor's Foundation

Publications:

Mullen, Matthew. 2013. "Cambodia Review For International Journal of Transitional Justice: The Need to Move Structural and

Mullen, Matthew. 2013. "Amplifying the Voices: Rights in Myanmar and the South Asian Rights Study

Mullen, Matthew. 2014. Pathways that Changed Myanmar: From Burles to Bribery.

